Additional Information When Connecting Equipment

Connecting a VCR

A. Standard connection for strong signal:

To record and playback digital programmes connect your VCR to the F socket using a scart lead (the VCR relies on the TV to convert the digital programmes to video and audio signals suitable for recording, which are then output from the TV through the scart connector).

To record analogue programmes on the VCR, connect your external aerial to the RF input socket on your VCR, then connect the VCR output lead to the upper aerial socket marked 3 on the TV.

B. Alternative connection for weak signal areas:

If poor reception occurs due to weak signals, then the following configuration is recommended (to avoid the possibility of the VCR affecting the TV signal quality):

To record and playback digital programmes connect your VCR to the F socket using a scart lead.

To record analogue programmes on the VCR, connect your external aerial to the upper aerial socket marked 3 on the TV, then connect a lead from the RF input of the VCR to the lower aerial socket marked 1 on the TV.

Note: In this configuration, the TV must be switched on or in standby for the signal to pass through the TV to the VCR.

Connecting Headphones

Plug in your headphones to the A socket on the front of the TV set.

Connecting to External Audio Equipment

Plug in your Hi-Fi equipment to the H sockets on the rear of the TV if you wish to amplify the audio output from the TV.

The output level of signals from the H socket is adjusted by changing the headphone volume. Refer to the 'Adjusting the Sound' section of this manual.
