	<input type="text" value="Designation"/>
	<input type="text" value="Company Name"/>
	<input type="text" value="Contact"/>
	<input type="text" value="Email Address"/>

Your references are one of your most valuable tools in your job search. Treat them with great respect, and keep their contact information confidential.

Try to include at least two work-related references and one character reference (preferably an academic reference), and if you can, include your current employer.

If you have limited work experience, list teachers/academics as references. Most importantly, always remember to ask your referees for permission first. It is a great idea to give them a courtesy call if you know they will be contacted. Finally, ensure that referee contact details are correct – if you're a recruiter, there's nothing more frustrating than chasing referee.

Specific Resume

Many job-seekers use a one-size-fits-all resume to cast a wide net in an attempt to snag the attention of employers as it saves time. How effective is this method?

Are your actual skills and possible contributions to these potential employers clearly spelt out? Submitting a standard resume is becoming obsolete and it's going to get harder to make yourself stand-out from the other hundred and one job-seekers applying for the same job.

The purpose of creating your Comprehensive Resume is to aid in the creation of this tailor-made resume to meet the specific employment goal in a job search.

A specific resume shows the potential employer your attention to details, your interest and commitment to the job opportunity, and convinces the reader your work will benefit a specific employer and that you should be among the candidates invited in for a closer look.

With your Comprehensive Resume established, you are free to create any number of specific resumes with ease. Your specific resumes can be attached and sent out to your potential employers.

The title of your Specific Resume is meant for your own reference only and will not be seen by others.

Cover letter

Details Hide

An effective cover letter should describe why you are interested in the position and what qualifications or experience make you a good fit. It should outline your relevant experience or education and also reflect your enthusiasm and willingness to learn. You can also take the opportunity to highlight a special skill or quality you possess that would be an asset for a candidate in that position.

A cover letter is also where you can sometimes make up for lack of experience or education, by explaining how you would still be a good choice because of other strengths. If the employer requires you to provide a suitable date for an interview, or your salary expectations, a cover letter gives you the opportunity to mention those details.

It is a long established fact that a reader will be distracted by the readable content of a page when its layout. The point of using Lorem Ipsum is that it has a more-or-less normal distribution of letters, as opposed to using 'Content here, content here', making it look like readable English. Many desktop publishing packages and web page editors now use Lorem Ipsum as their default model text, and a search engine will uncover many web sites still in their infancy. Various versions have evolved over the years, sometimes by accident,
