COMPACT SOFT START INVERTERS

These high efficiency power inverters use a modified sine wave to power mains equipment from either 12 or 24V battery. They are ideally used as a back up during a power outage or for use when travelling.

The modern electronics provide a stabilised 240V mains output voltage with short-circuit, overload protection and soft-start circuitry to protect equipment on power up.

Ideal for use with TVs, computers, hand held tools, kettles and other appliances.

COMPACT PURE SINE WAVE INVERTERS

These high efficiency soft start power inverters use a pure sine wave to power mains equipment from either 12 or 24V battery. The advantages of a pure sine wave over a modified sine wave are that they produce clean power with low harmonic distortion like that supplied from a mains outlet.

This means equipment which uses motors and inductive loads such as microwaves, vacuum cleaners, pumps and hand held tools run quieter, faster and cooler.

Also, items which do not run on modified sine wave inverters such as: Some battery chargers for cordless tools, fluorescent lights (with electronic ballasts) and items which use motors of varying speed all function correctly and efficiently.
