

Troubleshooting Series

Post 1: Restriction on Posting Replies

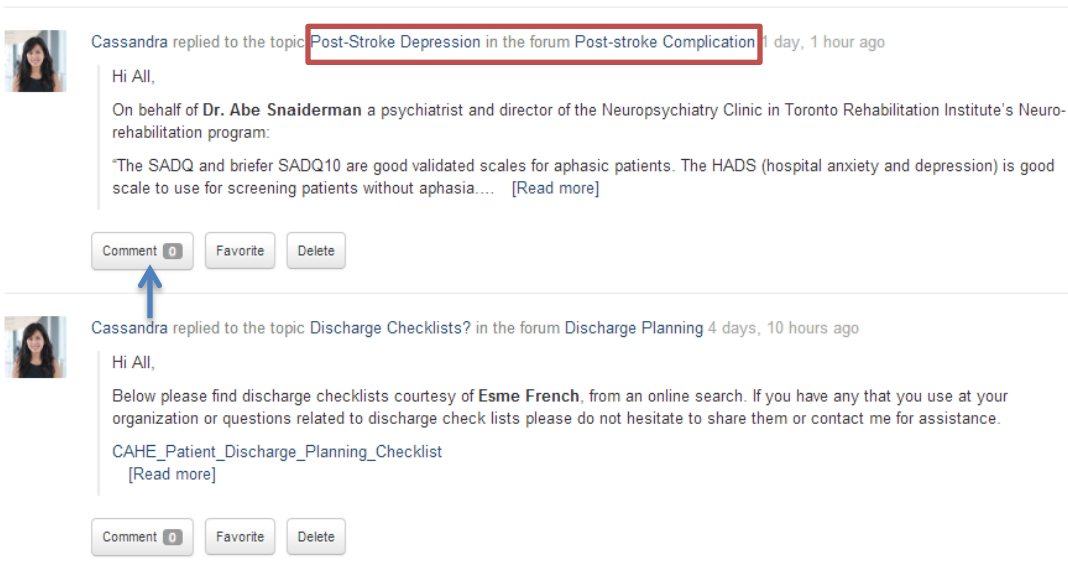

Recently we encountered a question regarding posting replies on the discussion forums. A member had posted a reply to a topic; however, it was not appearing in the discussion forums. After further investigation it appears that commenting on a post is not equivalent to replying to a post. Commenting on a post will only appear temporarily in the Activity tab of the site and will only notify the user whose post you are commenting on. Meanwhile, replying to a post is visible in the Discussion Forums to all members. As well all users in the forum who've subscribed to receive updates will be notified that there is a new post. For more information on how to post a reply please see below:

Restriction

To post a reply in the discussion forum you cannot comment on a post in the Activity tab. In the menu bar on the Activity tab:

In the Activity tab any new updates on the site will appear. For example if I post a reply to a forum, it will appear in this tab as shown below:

On the Activity tab there is the option to comment on my post, however, this this reply will not appear in the discussion forum. In this example in the topic Post-Stroke Depression on the forum Post-stroke Complication, any “comments” on my post will not be visible.

Instead there are two ways to reply to my post.

Option 1

This option is longer than Option 2 but these are also the steps for creating a new post.

1. Click on Discussion Forums:

2. Locate the forum Post-stroke Complication and click on it:

Hi All,

On behalf of Dr. Abe Sniderman a psychiatrist and director of the Neuropsychiatry Clinic in Toronto Rehabilitation Institute's Neuro-rehabilitation program:

"The SADQ and briefer SADQ10 are good validated scales for aphasic patients. The HADS (hospital anxiety and depression) is good scale to use for screening patients without aphasia.... [Read more]

Cassandra replied to the topic Discharge Checklists? in the forum Discharge Planning 4 days, 10 hours ago

Hi All,

Below please find discharge checklists courtesy of Esme French, from an online search. If you have any that you use at your organization or questions related to discharge check lists please do not hesitate to share them or contact me for assistance.
